College

"The apprentices have allowed us to increase our support technicians and released our more senior staff to concentrate on project work rather than the day to day support issues. It's 'refreshed' our team and changed the dynamics which has benefited everyone.

Michael Vaughan, Suffolk New College

Apprenticeships give individuals the opportunity to complete on the job training enabling them to gain skills and qualifications while being employed. Apprenticeships give employers the chance to train and develop staff that meet the needs of their business while individuals the opportunity to gain the experience necessary for career progression. IDEA is looking for organisations like Suffolk New College that have a strong use of IT, not just those who provide IT support to support apprentices within their organisations.

"Being an Apprentice has been Ideal for me as I never really enjoyed high school and therefore did not enjoy 6th form and was only there for the 1st year, After that i decided to become an Apprentice, Learning on the job has been fantastic for me, I have learnt so much and really enjoy being an apprentice, i am now very confident in my job role and am able to teach others."

James Eade, Apprentice
